VirginiaEstateLaw gives information about the administration of the decedent's estates in Virginia. Even though each estate will be different, there are a number of estate administration topics discussed on the website. Some of the information concerns probate, fiduciary qualification, inventory and accountings of fiduciary, spousal and family rights, creditor's claims, distribution proceedings, estate litigation, ancillary administration, trust administration, income, and estate taxes and forms and resources.

Some of the services provided to executors and administrators handling the administration of a decedent's estate in Virginia are (1) evaluation of the need for probate of a will, (2) identifying estate assets and assisting with actions to obtain possession and control; (3) assisting with income tax and estate tax requirement; (4) assisting with creditor claims; (5) assistance with preparation of inventory and accountings for the estate; (6) representation regarding estate litigation; (7) representation regarding estate distribution; and (8) handling or providing assistance regarding ancillary administration in Virginia.
